MESSRS. CARRUTHERS, Broome and Eilbeck returned from their expedition to the Jasper pass last Thursday. They report the pass and the country around it as not fitted for agriculture; but on account of the mineral and hot springs there, also the mild climate, it is considered a most suitable spot for a sanitarium should a railway pass there. Some excellent ranch and timber country was passed at various spots along the way and their trip has been one of profitable experience. Their explorations were largely confined to the Miatta or bad river, so named by the Indians because it has been known to rise seven feet in as many hours.

EXPLORATIONS AT JASPER PASS.

Mr. Geo. Purches, Harry Anthony and B. Wilson, returned from their expedition to the Jasper pass, Thursday last, bringing with them specimens of gold, quartz, mica and ores discovered in the Rocky mountains.

The party left Edmonton on August the 4th, and reached the Lake of the Isles, or, as it is called by the Cree Indians, "Spotted Lake" on the 9th. Here Pierre Grey, islander Findlay and Donald McDonald have taken up land and erected houses in a good section of open country that has a southerly aspect. No crops have so far been planted; but next year they will engage in agriculture. For the next few days the weather was very warm, several creeks had to be forded; but despite these little obstacles, 35 miles were made in a day. On the 14th they crossed the Pembina divide and first came in sight of the distant Rockies. Before evening they were at Wolf creek where camp was made, and where same, the ruffed grouse and spruce partridge, were shot for the evening meal.

The following day an early start was made; but before going very far the horses were mired in the muskies. These muskies were a considerable source of trouble throughout the greater part of the journey but in this instance some of the places had to be bridged in order to let the party pass. On camping for the night, they fared on short cake, i. e. the cook did not take long to make it.

The next day the party were favored with good travelling until near mid-day when another musky was encountered. At 6 p. m. they had reached White Mud where a halt was made. Here Gordon Cumming has a small storehouse or trading post. Twelve miles from here, and upon the following morning the party came across a deserted Indian village of the Saulteaux Indians, erected in honor of the Thunder God, and in which their feast and dance had been held. This lodge was built of large poles somewhat after the style of a teepee, and in circumference would enclose about 1/4 of an acre of ground.

The country now began to change. The soil became more sandy and stony and the undulating surface more marked. They were in what might be termed the Foot hills; but so imperceptible and gradual is the rise, that they hardly appear to be hills at all. Muskies are encountered both on the high and the low land. Small willows and spruce trees are everywhere present and the ground is covered with many varieties of brush. Smoky weather characterized the next two days of travel, and from what could be learned from two Indians who had come from Smoky river, the haze was due to a big bush fire south of the Athabasca river.

After resting on Sunday, a day's travel brought the party to Prairie creek, a little mountain stream in which there were some excellent speckled and silver trout. Some of the latter averaged 2 1/2 lbs. each. Here the beaver is not quite extinct, two having been caught there during this summer.

The next day, August 24th, the area were brought out and the first chopping was done. Travelling was very bad, so bad in fact, that on the following day only three miles was made before noon. The horse's backs showed evident signs of the hard work and the men were fatigued with the labour of the day. In many places the timber lay so thick that it was more convenient to walk along the fallen timber than attempt to walk on the ground.

On the following evening, after crossing a mile of musky, the party made their entrance to the Rockies and camped near Fiddle creek, the wintering post of the Mackenzie survey party. Here the party were compelled to stay for five days owing to the high water in the Athabasca river, which, by the old inhabitant was said to be higher than known before. Rain began to fall, and before morning the tops of the mountains were covered with snow. Here, on the slopes of the mountains are the big horn sheep, which are very difficult to get near, and are usually shot by the Indians who secrete themselves in the heights above the small alkali lakes to which the sheep make frequent visits. These sheep live in the most inaccessible part of the mountains and often let themselves down perpendicular places several feet by dropping on their heads, the hard skull and peculiar curve of the horns giving them a natural turn over and breaking the fall. For this reason, the outer curve of the horn in old sheep is usually flattened or broken.

After crossing the Athabasca river, camp was made at Jasper House. Harry Anthony here left with J. Graham, a freighter who had taken out supplies for Mr. Carruthers and party, for the Tete Jaune cache. Mr. Purches and Ben Wilson accompanied them for three days.

On Sept. 10th, the two parties separated. Harry Anthony and J. Graham left for the Tete Jaune and Geo. Purches and Ben Wilson returned to their former camp. On arrival there, they found that their absence, Mr. Carruthers, Mr. Broome and Mr. Hillecock had pitched camp there. A teepee was put up and fraternal greetings with the new arrivals exchanged.

Mr. Carruthers and party left the following day on a prospecting tour.

On the 18th, Purches and Wilson reached the end of Noyes' trail where it meets the government trail going to the Tete Jaune, and found the following claims located, "Gibson, Norris, Carey and Houston" and on the 19th, having concluded that the indications warranted their laying out claims, stakes were driven higher up the mountain, near the snow summit on the south end as the other claims. Solid veins of quartz here run horizontally and vertically in the face of the rock, from thread-like veins of about a quarter of an inch in thickness to as large as three inches. The rock here is a formation of limestone sandstone and shale.

On Harry Anthony's return from the Tete Jaune, the journey homeward was begun, Mr. Carruthers and his party joining in with them. Leaving the Jasper on Sept. 1st, the trip back was made in fourteen days, the journey being more difficult than going on account of heavy gales blowing down the dead Pulpine across the trail. Some days only two miles an hour were made, and one day the party were tied up at Thunder God camp by a heavy fall of snow. The country between the Pembina divide and Edmonton, is said to contain a sufficient quantity of spruce and poplar to supply pulp for paper mills for many years, and besides the quantity of the timber there is a sufficient water power to keep mills running as in the day.

On Sunday night, the moon shone so bright, and the evening was so delightful that they traveled all night by moonlight, making halts and lighting fires as in the day.

Besides the specimens of ore, several skins and trappers' specimens were secured. A feature of the journey, not the least interesting, was the number of photographs taken.

JUDGE ROULEAU arrived from Calgary on Monday to hold court. His intention is to dispose of the criminal cases and a few of the minor civil cases and then return to Calgary to meet Judge Scott and arrange for the carrying on of the judicial work of the double district. He will return in November and dispose of the remainder of the cases.

An error occurred in the communication from Dr. Wilson which appeared in last issue. The word "not" was inserted where it should not have been. A sentence in which allusion was made to Mr. Taylor's dissenting judgment read: "This was not written some days after the award was signed." It should have read: "This was written some days after the award was signed."

D. E. NOYES and A. COGHAN located their quartz claims on the Myette river in the Rocky Mountains near the Jasper pass on Monday, in the Edmonton land office. The first assay of rock from the claims showed $3.50 of gold to the ton and the second, which was received recently $7.35 to the ton. The first specimen was float rock and the second was from some distance in the ledge. It is probable that Messrs. Noyes and Coghlan will sink a shaft on the ledge this winter.

THE September number of the Canadian Magazine is well illustrated and filled with a rich variety of matter. Several of the articles rank with the best in current magazine literature, while the fiction is bright and most entertaining. "The Gate of Lake Michigan" (Mackinaw) by Capt. J. A. Currie, "The Monastery of La Trappe," at Oka, by Clifford Smith, and "The Pagan Iroquois" of the Grand river reserve, by A. H. Heming, are the illustrated articles, and they are full of interest. An exceedingly valuable study in comparative politics is Edward Meek's "The Canadian Constitution: its fictions and realities," by R. E. Gosnell, deals with a peculiar phase of modern politics. Other articles are "With the Prairie chicken in Manitoba," by R. S. Masson; "Irrigation in the Arid Regions of America," by Harry S. Inglis; "Production of wheat in Canada," by Sydney C. D. Roper; Elgin Myers, Q. C., in "Ford vs. De Pontes, 30 Beaven, 572," founded on actual fact, a most interesting, if somewhat sad story of life; "Who was he?" by Miss C. A. Fraser, is a pleasing ghost story of southern Ontario. Amongst the poetic contributions is a very powerful poem by William Wilfred Campbell. The Canadian Magazine is published by the Ontario Publishing Co., (Ltd.), Toronto, $2.50 per annum.

The Winnipeg Weekly Tribune, which is acknowledged to have—by rival publishers—the largest circulation of any paper published in Canada west of Lake Superior, is now offering great inducements to intending subscribers. It can be obtained from now to January 1st, 1896, for $1—a very slight advance on the cost of the white paper used in its publication. At its regular price of $1 a year The Weekly Tribune is certainly extra value, and with the balance of this year free the offer becomes an extraordinary one. It can be had from now to the end of next year by sending $1 to The Tribune Publishing Co., Winnipeg.
